Part 1

Ben Bunny built a tall block tower in the playroom. He placed each block carefully and saved the red block for the very top.

Part 2

Coco raced a toy car across the rug. She turned too fast and bumped the tower. Crash! The blocks tumbled down.

Part 3

Ben’s ears drooped. “I worked hard on that,” he said. Coco wanted to say the car did it, but she knew she had been driving the car.

Part 4

Coco stopped the car and looked at Ben. “I am sorry I knocked down your tower,” she said. “I should have driven more slowly.”

Part 5

Then Coco asked, “Can I help you build it again?” Ben nodded. Coco found the blue blocks while Ben stacked the yellow ones.

Part 6

The new tower leaned to one side. Coco held the bottom while Ben moved one block. Together they made it strong.

Part 7

Ben placed the red block on top. “I like this tower even better,” he said. Coco smiled, but she still drove her car slowly after that.

Part 8

Coco learned that saying sorry is important. Helping fix the problem shows that the apology comes from the heart.
