Part 1

A silver paper moon fell from the classroom sky wall and split along three folded lines. Jun found four curved pieces on the floor.

Part 2

He placed the pieces by size, but the edges formed a wobbly oval. Two pieces had tiny punched stars that should make one constellation.

Part 3

Jun rotated the star pieces until the punched dots lined up. Their torn edges then fitted together like neighboring puzzle pieces.

Part 4

A third piece looked upside down because its shiny side faced the table. Jun flipped it and found a matching blue paint mark.

Part 5

The final narrow crescent overlapped the bottom edge. Jun remembered that the original moon had a folded pocket holding a paper owl.

Part 6

He rebuilt the pocket, slid the owl inside, and checked the outer curve. The four pieces now formed one smooth round moon.

Part 7

His classmates taped the moon from behind so the repair stayed neat. The punched constellation and blue mark appeared in their proper places.

Part 8

Jun learned to rotate, flip, and overlap before deciding a piece cannot fit. Small surface clues helped him rebuild the whole design.
